

“Good morning, class!” said Miss Clayton.

“We’re having a sock puppet show today!”

The class cheered.

They’d never had a sock puppet show before!

“And,” Miss Clayton added,

“you’ll be making your own sock puppets.”

The class cheered again.

Carly couldn't wait to get started.

She loved making art,
and her parents said she was good at it.

Carly felt certain she was going to make the best sock puppet in the class.

Carly rushed to the table of art supplies.

She took everything—except the sheet that showed how to put the puppet together.

Carly had never made a sock puppet before,
but she was SURE she didn't need pictures like everyone else.
