

emperor penguin

This birdie was missing a part—doctors noticed no knees on her chart.
But she knows how to flap with a flipper.
A butler with wings—pretty smart!

Emperor penguins
sleep standing up rather than lying on the icy cold ground.

polar bear

I am the king of the icebergs,
standing tall in my white fur coat,
alone on the melting sea ice,
trying to stay afloat.

A polar bear can smell prey from up
to 20 miles away.

weddell seal

I never leave my ice cap home.
I can dive 2,000 feet and remain underwater for nearly an hour.
What a pleasingly freezing domain!

Weddell seals must poke their heads above water to breathe. In winter, they use their teeth to chew breathing holes in the ice.
